

One of the girls' sections in the Brooklyn Sunday School parade, photographed at Prospect Park, where the chief features of the day were witnessed by thousands of spectators around the rim of the meadow. The parade was reviewed by the Vice-President and Mrs. Coolidge.

Paul Thompson.

One small section of the ninety-second annual parade of the Brooklyn Sunday School Union, in which 125,000 children presented a remarkable spectacle recently in Prospect Park.

Paul Thompson.

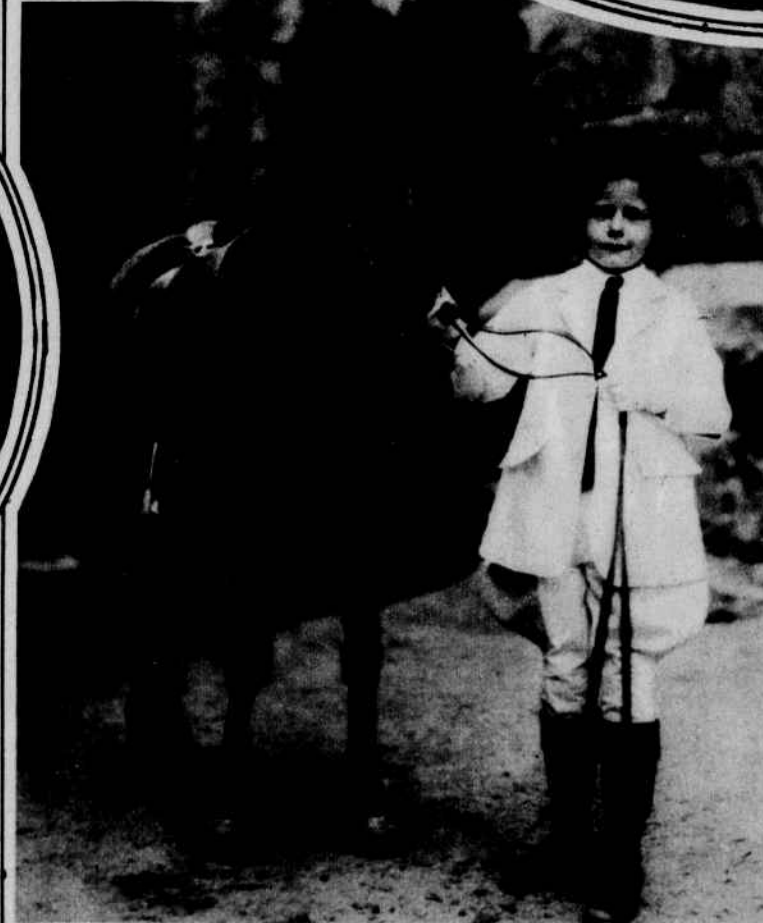

Some of the notables before whom the Brooklyn Sunday School parade passed in review. Left to right, Senator William M. Calder, Postmaster-General Will H. Hays, Vice-President Calvin Coolidge, Mayor Hylan and Mrs. Coolidge.

Paul Thompson.

Mrs. James Shewan and her children, James, Jr., and Patricia, prove apt subjects for a pleasing camera study.

Campbell Studios.

Betty Gage, daughter of Major P. S. Gage of West Point, with her pony, Barbara Fritchie, at the West Point horse show. Copyright, Keystone View.

Miss Katherine Montgomery, a New York girl who plans to reclaim a rundown Pennsylvania farm. She has completed a course in agriculture at Cornell and a classical course at Wilson College.

International.

Francis Davis Millet, son of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Millet of Great Neck, L. I., and grandson of the famous painter, the late Francis D. Millet.

Campbell Studios.

Kate Ogden Wilbur, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Wilbur of New Rochelle, makes a delightful camera study.

Kikuchi studio.

Mrs. Arturo de Herren, formerly Miss Wanamaker, who sailed recently on La France for a summer rest in Paris.

Copyright, Keystone View.

Mario G. Menocal, former President of Cuba, photographed aboard La France just before he sailed with his family for Europe.

Copyright, Keystone View.